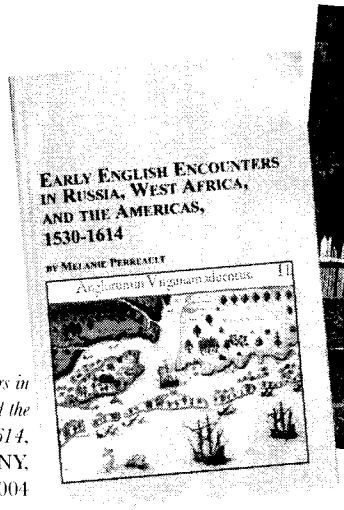
New Books at the Nabb Center

The Nabb Research Center is pleased to announce the acquisition of two titles produced by Nabb Board member and Salisbury University professor Melanie Perreault. These two publications are a great addition to our growing collection of over 6,000 titles accessible in the Center's reading room.

Dr. Meanie Perreault



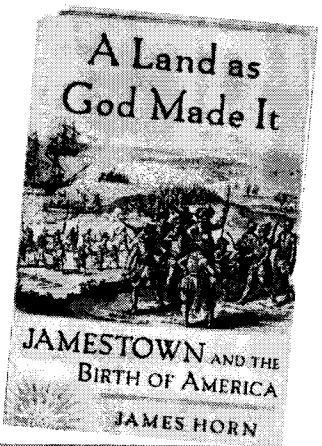
Early English Encounters in Russia, West Africa and the Americas, 1530-1614, Lewiston, NY, Edwin Mellen Press, 2004

Colonial Chesapeake: New Perspectives (edited by Debra Meyers and Melanie Perreault), Lanham, MD, Lexington Books, 2006.

Washburn Distinguished Lecture in American History

Wednesday, April 11, 2007
Wicomico Room, Guerrieri University Center

The Nabb Research Center presents the Washburn Distinguished Lecture in American History given by James Horn, author of A Land as God Made It: Jamestown and the Birth of America (Basic Books, 2005). Horn has agreed to speak on campus next year on April 11, 2007, mere weeks before the 400th anniversary of the Jamestown landing in May 1607. We encourage you to reserve this date in your calendar. This event is co-sponsored by the Salisbury University History Department and the Edward H. Nabb Research Center for Delmarva History and Culture at Salisbury University.



Now On Display

"Whistling Down Delmarva's Tracks: Eastern Shore Railroad Memorabilia," a collection of railroad station photographs, railroad maps, artifacts and, of course, model trains, is on display through September 30 at the Edward H. Nabb Research Center for Delmarva History and Culture at Salisbury University. This exhibit is free and open to the public—of all ages. For more information please feel free to contact us at 410-543-6312 or via e-mail at rcdhac@salisbury.edu

Announcement

Congratulations to Jason and Rachel Illari who were married in Salisbury on July 24. Jason Illari was a graduate research assistant at the Nabb Center before graduating from the Salisbury University History Department in May 2006 with a master's in history. We wish him the best in both his future pursuits of higher learning and in his new life with his wife Rachel.
